Rajneeshpuram

Oregon 97741

To whom it may concern,

After five years of study in an English Polytechnic, I completed the examinations of the Institute of Electrical Engineers. I then followed an Engineering career with the National Distribution Authority in England. In 1976, I undertook a post graduate course in Education and qualified to teach Electrical Engineering in tertiary education.

During this last period of study I became interested in the work of many modern psychologists with a particular reference to education. Somehow, psychology remained at the level of the laboratory experiment and lacked a real and practical application for me.

In 1978 I was introduced to some of the writings of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, and as a consequence the psychology of man became relevant to me and had direct implication in my career.

In 1981, Bhagwan came to live in Oregon and people came to live close to him. Here in Rajneesh-puram an experiment in living is evolving and it appears that a century of change has happened in just two years.

The group living around Bhagwan is composed of ordinary people having the frailties, needs and desires common to all of us. But here results of living together for two years are immediately apparent, a group sensitive to the needs of its individuals and the environment, and dynamic in its development.

I have no doubt at all that this could not have happened without Bhagwan living here. He has focussed and continually renews the energies of all around him.

The psychological barriers that we live with, unaware of their existence, are dissolved away in this unique environment and make possible the loving explosion of energy that has transformed this arid part of central Oregon.

People around Bhagwan are relaxed and content and laughter is the norm.

His knowledge of mankind is unparalleled and his contribution to modern psychology immeasurable. I have no doubt that He will be known as the most profound psychologist of our time.

Recognition of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh does not have to be post-humous, and it would be an indication of this nation's maturity and freedom to welcome Him. Any country in which He resides can only benefit from the loving guidance of this unique teacher.

I implore you to see clearly and without petty prejudice, this opportunity available, and review His residency application favorably

Yours Sincerely
Sw. Prem Nidosh.
