

To whom it may concern:

I have been a disciple of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh for 2 years and have been reading his books for 5 years. I was raised with a diverse religious background; I was baptized a Methodist, attended a Unitarian church where my father was the minister, went to grade school at a Quaker school and also attended the Vedanta Society's Sunday services with my parents. My father then returned to Harvard where he received his Ph.D. in comparative religions.

At the University of Vermont I took introductory religion courses as well as psychology. Through all this many questions were raised about religion and its place in my life. When I first read a book by Bhagwan I said, "Here is a man who understands". Through reading and experiencing Bhagwan's meditation techniques much growth has been happening.

Last year I attended the First Annual World celebration for one day and felt the difference of being in the physical presence of the living master. Now I am living at the ranch and just beginning to open up to the work and the energy of the Buddhafield which is so different from anything I've ever experienced, I can't explain it. Being with Bhagwan makes all the difference.

Sincerely,

Ma Premrani
