To whom it may concern

I was born in Germany. After finishing school I studied law at the University of Freiburg, one of the most famous and ancient in Germany. After six years of studying I got my law-degree on 5th december 1981.

Apart from my interest in law I always felt attracted by languages, because I travelled a lot. I speak and write French, Italien, Englisch and German.

I was always interested in knowing different cultures, different people and different ways of living.

In 1980 I went to India. I arrived in Poona where Bhagwan was living at this time. I knew that I had never met such an extraordinary person. I went each morning to his discourses. He was speaking exactly about what I had experienced by travelling. He was saying that it is time for a new man, because the world, with its modern transport systems is becoming smaller and smaller. I have friends all over the world and felt that there are values deeper than nation, culture or languages.

I came this year for the Summer-Festival at Rajneeshpuram and met people from all over the world. There is no discrimination, each being is a human being. Here at Rajneeshpuram the right of everybody to non-discrimination is a reality. It is practised. It is not only a theoretical right. This are happening through His love and His silence. There is no need for word. Deeper values cannot be expressed by words. Worshipping with people from all over the world, I see that it is not the language that makes the union between us, It is His ^{wordless} teaching of love and silence.

Here at Rajneeshpuram the humans rights of personal freedom, non discrimination and many other are a reality, lived and experienced daily through the worship in His silence presence.
